read Marie Correll, and emphatically swore That she'd visit her to come and look for needles every day; And, as Auntie got suspicious she was keeping something back, So she never wed a man who'd ever kissed a girl before. But her proof of her simplicity, the stack was made of straw; And though he dropped a gross of them around the stacks of hay, She went up on her own account to hunt around a stack; When the maiden Aunt said to her "You've an awful task in view; when the Farmer's son appeared, and asked with interest
