A Prepossessing Little Maid.

Lyric by J.W. JOHNSON.

Music by BOB COLE.

Moderato espress.

1. From a little village, came a little maid,
2. Very prepossessing, was this little maid,
3. She possess'd a pony and a little cart,
4. She possess'd a secret, known to very few,

Quite a simple little country girl, Cheeks as red as roses,
Ooh! to quite a very mark'd degree, How it was, that she pos-
Through the park she drove one early spring, There she met a young man,
She discover'd how to manage man, She possess'd the power to Copyright MCMIV by Jos. W. Stern & Co.

British Copyright Secured.
eyes of deep-est shade,
sected so man-y things,
she pos-sessed his heart,
keep a se-cet too,
Down her back there hung a lit-tle curl;
It was rath-er dif-fi-cult to see;
Soon she ownd a pret-ty wed-ding ring;
And you know not man-y wo-men can;

Just a mer-ry twinkle lurk'd with-in her eyes,
Now be-side the mer-ry twinkle in her eyes,
She pos-sessed a long-ing for her child-hood joys,
And her wis-dom grew so sub-tile and so deep,

But no hint of mis-chief it con-veyed;
And the fresh-ness of her coun-try charm;
Dain-ty lit-tle dolls that closed their eyes;
Man-y ques-tions hub-by had to dodge;

pp colia voce
Yet that twinkle made her, as you may surmise,
She possesses lots of costly things,
Bobby went to toy-land bought her lots of toys,
Late one night, she heard him talking in his sleep,

Quite a prepossessing little maid.
That she did not bring from off the farm.
Now she has a little doll that cries.
Now she knows the password of the lodge.

Chorus.

So neat, so sweet, When she left the farm, the bees they missed her; But shy,.___ Oh! my! ___ And strange to say of men she seem'd a-fraid;___ Yet she, ___ you seek___ was so taking they could not resist her, Because she was___ A very prepossessing little maid___

3971-4