When Other Hearts Grow Cold.

Words by RICHARD H. GERARD.
Author of "Sweet Adoline."

Music by GEORGE BOTSFORD.

Andante Moderato.

You've said to me your last good-bye,
And

'Twas vain in me to think that you Could

tried to tell me you don't care,
But

love an humble heart like mine,
But

as I look into your eyes I see the trace of tear-drops my love was so great and true, I took your pity for love's there. Perhaps another has your heart, And that is why you bid me day you know not where to go, You may forget me turn, Come to my heart, 'tis when we part, But this I want your heart to know.

all your own, Love's spark for you will ever burn.
REFRAIN.

When other hearts grow cold you'll find mine burning

With fire of love as in the days of old.

Speak the word and soon I'll be returning to comfort you, when other hearts grow cold.
