I can't forget the day my Dick proposed.
The whole world seemed all happy, bright and gay.
And as my head upon his breast repose, His ecstacy.

sy quite car-ried me a-way He was so full, so full of gai-ety and joy, He clasped in his my lit-tle hand "I love you, love you" said the laugh-ing hap-py boy, I wept and cried and sobbed "I un-der-stand."
Boo Hoo! Boo Hoo! It makes me cry. To think how happy I was then.

Boo Hoo! Boo Hoo! It makes me cry. He is my King, my king of men.

Boo Hoo! Boo Hoo! It was such fun. Those crying girls.

Boo Hoo! Boo Hoo! Boo Hoo! Those
Happy jolly court-ing days.

He is the one I'll love through all my days.

Bridal.

Mrs. Summers.

I'll
never forget when Harry popped. He did it quite by rule. Said he "My dear" and then he stopped and blushed like some poor fool. "Well, well," said I, "What's on your mind?" "Oh, nothing," stammered he, I said "I know it Te-hee tee-hee, Now wasn't that unkind? And then I took his limp right arm, And put it round my waist And said "Now Hal, I meant no harm, speak up my boy, make haste!" Said he "There's something I must say, yes, something dear, to you!" Said

I "Don't take your arm away, I'm on my boy, you'll do. "
