No One But You!

Lyric by

OTTO HAUERBACH.

Music by

KARL HOSCHNA.

Allegretto.

There were Now

good old hand-some

Doctor Brown, Doctor Gray

Bones of great re-nown, In his way,

But
And

none of these was good enough for Dolly,

For she had heard them say That had a nature ver-y sym-pa-thet-ic;

So by her side he knelt, Her handsome Doc-tor Gray, Was rath-er young and wealth-y, too, and jolly.

She

flut-ting pulse he felt, His touch was ver-y gen-tle and mag-net-ic. He had a case of nerves And she knew she had some curves, So she tried her best, I'm sure, This little maid to cure, His sent in haste for Doctor Gray to treat her; But her daily visits he kept right on paying; He thought her close to death. So it almost took his breath When she symptoms never stopped Until finally he "popped" And smiled and whispered as he bent to greet her: (Spoken) Oh, Dr. I she at once got well while he was saying: Oh Dolly.

"I've got the queer-est feel-ing steal-ing 'round my heart;

Seems like my ach-ing, qua-king heart strings must part.

Gee! such a thump-ing, bump-ing! Oh! what shall I do?

No one, I'm sure, can cure me— No one but you."
