seeming to scorn her; A gay young cavalier chanced to pass seemed to be fated; When that young cavalier saw she was by And happened to see That wallflower so shy, He bowed and said. With never a dance, No partner she had; With secret said! May I have this dance? Her blush and smile won his joy she saw him draw near, With beating heart and with heart at a glance, But before she replied by yes or by no, He'd hope and with fear; Such a shy little maid knew not what to say, He placed his arm round her waist just so. And then while they danced knew 'twas yes; so whirled her a-way. While waltz mu-sic played

Thus he whis-pered en-tranced.
Thus he sang to the maid.

Andante molto

Wall flow'r so sweet, blooming a-lone, Come I en-treat! Come be mine own! None is like thee! No flow'r that grows, Mine thou shalt be, Lit-tle wild rose. Wall flow'rdi-vine, Bloom just for me, Faithful for ev'er I will
