My Dreamy China Lady

Lyric by
GUS. KAHN

SONG

Music by
EGBERT VAN ALSTYNE

Moderato

PIANO

VOICE

Where the lantern lights are all a-glow,
To a little China girl

After many years of waiting there Little China girl is bunglow, Ching Lo would go To serenade in the evening, in despair, she sighs and cries

"Come back to me little sweetheart."

But to-night his heart is sad and blue And his little song is But another day her heart will learn That her lover never mournful, too. He has come to say he must sail away Far across old China will return. And she mourns the day that he sailed away Far across old China

Bay. And he sings this serenade To his little China maid.
Bay. Still in dreams she seems to hear His love song ringing near.

CHORUS

Slumber on, my dreamy China lady, When the lights are burning low.

Soon I'll sail away from you but may be I'll return and then you'll know how much I love you. Wait for me, my dream-y China La-dy, When the lotus flow-ers

bloom. 'Neath the o-ri-en-tal skies of blue,

In a lit-tle rick-shaw built for two, We'll go on a Chi-na hon-eymoon. moon. D.C.
