Susie was a nurse, pretty little nurse and she won renown. She had Susie had become, loved by every one who came there to rest. There were eyes that said "be careful," Still the boys kept hanging round.

Lots who had heart trouble, But not one would dare confess.

When she'd hold the hand of an injured man, temperatures flew high;
Time flew quickly by, people wondered why, not one had come out. But pulse would leap to fever heat then you'd hear the victim cry;

They began to understand when they heard the inmates shout.
