“If sometimes our greatest artists have been the most critical of our society, it is because their sensitivity and their concert for justice, which must motivate any true artists, makes them aware that our nation fall short of its highest potential. I see little of more importance to the future of our country and our civilization than the full recognition of the place of the artist.” President John F. Kennedy

Born in St. Louis on June 4, 1932, Oliver Nelson was the youngest of three musically talented children. He began studying the piano at age 6 and the saxophone at 11. While still in grade school he started to play professionally with a territory band in the Omaha, Nebraska area, later joining a big band lead by saxophonist Louis Jordan.

After a two-year hitch with the United States Marines as a member of the Third Division Marine Band station in Japan, Oliver returned to his musical studies at Washington University in St. Louis to study composition and theory. He moved to New York in 1959 and immediately found work with the Erskine Hawkins group: a small combo featuring Bill Davis; and later with the Louis Bellson big band.

As a saxophonist, Oliver Nelson was influenced by the playing of tenor men Jimmy Forrest, Don Byas, Wardell Gray, Sonny Rollins, and John Coltrane, and the alto stylings of Charlie Parker and Johnny Hodges.

Soon after arriving in New York, Oliver began composing and arranging and before long was in high demand, especially by recording companies to write and conduct complete albums. He acquired a distinguished reputation as a composer-arranger in both jazz and classical music with performances of numerous classical pieces including: a song cycle for contralto and piano, '61; Dirge for Chamber Orchestra, '62; Soundpiece for String Quartet and Contralto, '63; and jazz works such as Soundpiece for Jazz Orchestra and the music from The Kennedy Dream.

Oliver Nelson later moved to the west coast where he became involved in writing music for many of the television show of the 1970's, while also leading his own big band. The recording of his band Live in Los Angeles established his name with west coast audiences. His orchestral jazz recordings: Afro – American Sketches; Full Nelson; Fantabulous; The Kennedy Dream; and Sound Piece for Jazz Orchestra remain today a major influence on the writings of jazz composers and film writers.
