Throughout the West and Europe, community colleges and public universities have been exploring ways to better serve the needs of students who may not have been first-generation college students. This has led to the development of new programs and policies, such as the Arizona State University’s First Generation Initiative, which aims to increase the number of students from low-income backgrounds who graduate from college. The initiative includes a range of supports, such as mentoring and financial aid, to help students succeed. By 2020, Arizona State University had seen a significant increase in the number of first-generation students who were graduating. The initiative has been recognized as a model for other institutions across the country. The success of the Arizona State University’s First Generation Initiative demonstrates the potential for community colleges and public universities to make a significant impact on student success. By continuing to invest in programs and policies that support first-generation students, these institutions can help to ensure that all students have the opportunity to achieve their goals.
