gin to fail, and in the quiet skies rosy toes, I count them each in turn, charger now, she says it very slow, The little stars peep shyly out, like And all in vain the baby tries the But still there's not enough of pigs, or baby angel's eyes, jingling rhyme to learn,

else an extra toe,
When every bird has ceased its song She mixes all the pig-ties up She don't know what's the master, and toes, But still she tries, and every time is sure that now she knows, She do, She says, I don’t think any way that pigs are nice, do you? Her romp together for a time and then she sits her down, And takes her shoes and thinks I’m very mean to laugh, and then a frown appears, And then her lips belittle eyes grow heavy and she thinks she’ll go to bed, So kneeling in her stockings off, with many a dainty frown, Then climbs up on my knees and says, “Please, gin to pout, her eyes to fill with tears, But long before the tear-drops fall I

Pa-pa, one more time, Tell me about the little pig, and so I sing the rhyme:—

kiss them all a-way, And once again I count the toes, and once again I say:—

last long kiss and sweet, And as I leave her to her dreams, I hear her still repeat:—

Refrain.

Tempo di Valse.

This little pig went to market, This little pig stayed at home,

This little pig he had roast beef,

This little pig he had none, This little pig cried,
